SPANISH CHILDREN

JUL - 5 1921

Everyone is fond of children and when they are such unusually bright and interesting kiddies as those Burton Holmes found in Spain, you cannot blame him for introducing them to the children and the "Grown-Ups" of America. Spanish children, especially those of the common people, are always amusing and particularly picturesque and interesting,—at play or at work, awake or asleep. Of course the children of the common people always seem to be mingled with goats and burros; these two kinds of "Four-Legs" are always an interesting part of Spanish street life and Burton Holmes lets them play important roles in this life-drama of his Spanish kiddies. Of course you also are invited into high Spanish society, and there you will meet little princesses crowned with glorious combs, watch their wonderful dancing, their lovely dresses and also get acquainted with some Dons and Hidalgos of high degree. One can never describe or tell much about someone else's children, but they are very lovely to look at and of course Spanish children never are rude or noisy—in Mr. Holmes' pictures.

For HOUSE ORGAN:

If you want to get acquainted with some of the prettiest children in the world come on and see the Spanish children Burton Holmes has imported via the screen route. He will present to you the kiddies of Spain in every walk of life, from the lowliest of the lowly to the highest and richest in all Spain.
